Antonio Solano, a highly successful family man who comes from humble beginnings, strives to give his family everything he never had in his youth. In his eagerness to ensure they lack nothing, Antonio becomes so generous that he ends up spoiling his wife and children. As a result, the three kids—Eduardo, Javier, and Viviana—grow into spoiled young adults who are good for nothing, spending money only on superficial and material things, while his wife Catalina cares only about maintaining her beauty through cosmetic surgeries. To make matters worse, his own sister Leticia and her husband Mateo, as well as Guadalupe, Catalina's mother, also live off his wealth.

On his birthday, Antonio realizes the consequences of his actions when none of his loved ones remember to wish him a happy birthday—and worse, they only seem to keep asking for more. That's when Antonio finally breaks and decides to draw the line: from now on, each of them will have to work to earn their living. His life takes a sharp turn with the arrival of Julieta, whom he almost runs over while she was fleeing her wedding after discovering the truth about her fiancé, Elvis. Julieta becomes someone he simply cannot stay away from.
